

Short Paper 2.4: Major Paper Conference Memo

engl 111 / sec. Q / fall quarter 2006-07 / chang

Almost two weeks ago, you were introduced to this sequence's final major paper assignment. Hopefully by this point, you have had a chance to read your readings a few times, you have had a chance to screen your film or thoroughly explored your website at least once, you have been researching your topic, and you have been focusing your final paper's main claim.

Continue to work on your main claim. What is your goal, your exigence for this paper? What question are you asking about your film? What do you think your image is "doing" in terms of the cultural and identificatory interventions we have been talking about in class? How does your film function to represent a contact zone as well as function as a contact zone?

What does your film or site tell us—the audience of your artifact and your analysis—about ourselves, our culture, our world? What does it tell us about things like race, class, sex, gender, sexuality, nationality, history, celebrity, power, education, and so on? Obviously, you are not going to be able to write about everything you discover. Choose what is most interesting, most compelling to you. Also choose what you can support with your readings and outside research.

For your conference, prepare a 1-page memo written to me that:

- 1) expresses your final paper's main claim and explains why you believe it to be a reasonable and viable argument.
- 2) supplements your claim with two or three quotes or other evidence that help elaborate where your final paper is going.
- 3) briefly outlines your paper and possible sub-claims.
- 4) raises any specific questions you may have about your claim, your analysis, or your research.

You may also want to supplement your explanation with what additional research you have found. Be certain to bring the texts you are working with to your conference. Be prepared to discuss your memo and your paper at your conference.
